In 1993, Talia Carner, an author, publisher and feminist, went with a group of American women to the former Soviet Socialist Republic to take part in a women’s conference intended to teach Russian women about capitalism and business. While in Moscow, Carner witnessed the uprising against President Boris Yeltsin and its violent suppression. Carner observed, “Russians still harbored the souls of embittered, subjugated people, a dispirited nation that had known no freedom, privacy or choices. They were unprepared for democracy, freedom of the press, personal choices, market economy, and assumptions about transactions be they social, economic, cultural or legal that shared the common concept of decency, if not rule of law.”

From that experience, Carner created fictional American heroine, Brooke, who arrives in Moscow from New York in 1993 just as Carner did and is plunged immediately into a society which seems totally alien due to the incessant violence and corruption at every level of society. Some of the Americans in the group turn around and go home immediately, but Brooke persists in trying to help the Russian women attending the conference by teaching them about business and by helping them to investigate the sources of corruption which are keeping them subjected to Mafia-like gang violence and intimidation.

The writing is fast-paced and full of descriptive passages which put the reader at the center of the action; the plot barrels along at top speed as Brooke and her new friends are subjected to more and more danger and violence and murder.

Characters like Dr. Olga Rozanova, a Soviet era functionary who now dreams of a new Russia free from misogyny and violence against women, and Svetlana, a translator whose only hope for her small daughter is a future where she will have enough to eat, will stay with you for a long time.

Lessons from Lucy
by Dave Barry | Reviewed by Marion Mango

Are you still suffering from the holiday blues? Hoping you won’t have to hock your hamster to pay your next credit card bill? Now is a good time to pull yourself out of the winter doldrums. Settle down in your favorite cozy corner and wrap yourself in the wacky warmth of Dave Barry’s unique humor.

Lucy, Dave’s mixed-breed rescue dog is turning ten (70 in human years) and Dave is at the same threshold – facing his 70th birthday. He realizes there are many life lessons Lucy has mastered and he has not---yet. Lucy loves everyone—doesn’t judge by appearances—and Dave, well, sometimes does. Next are lessons in patience, acceptance, and fun. Lucy understands ten words, among which is “Bubbe,” Dave’s mother-in-law for whom Lucy will wait patiently at the front window, paws resting eagerly on the sill. Lucy, unlike Dave, has graciously accepted the limitations of advancing years. And she continues to have fun.

Dave does try to, mostly with his band, The Rock Bottom Remainders, whose members include Amy Tan and Stephen King. Another lesson to be learned is mindfulness. Who would have thought that a mere animal would be so spiritually advanced? (Dog lovers know this to be true.) Pay attention to those you love---right now! Lucy is most always in a good mood and forgets insults and offences instantly. Lesson here? Letting go of your anger---another teaching opportunity from canine consciousness. Here’s another: Don’t lie (though some white lies might be permitted), especially if you have memory lapses. Also, if you have said something truly hurtful, be big enough to apologize! (Lucy is not in danger there.)

Perhaps the most important lesson of all---love---is contained in Dave’s last chapter.
His dear daughter, Sophie, is partially paralyzed overnight by a mysterious illness the day before leaving for her freshman year at Duke University. The prognosis was negative. But through the love and support of family (including Lucy), friends, and skilled doctors, plus Sophie’s indomitable spirit, within a year she was able to walk again and start her college education.

Laugh-inducing, thought-provoking chapters in this volume are sure to warm the cockles of your heart, and save a fortune in heating and doctor bills. (Laughter is often better than medicine!)

Enjoy!

PS: Dave Barry is a Pulitzer Prize-winning humorist whose works include the novels Big Trouble (DVD available from the library) and Crazy City.

His humor covers such diverse topics as travel, home ownership, and life in general. His previous book Florida: Best State Ever is sure to make you chuckle----and I don’t mean the candy.

Book available in large print.

If you love Stephen King you will love this book. A young boy who is a genius is kidnapped in the middle of the night and his parents are killed. He is placed with a handful of other children who were all tested (some sadistically) with no explanation.

The young hero attempts to escape. You cannot put this book down. It’s thrilling.
Movie Review

Gigi

starring: Leslie Caron, Louis Jourdan, Maurice Chevalier 1958 /PG/116mnts/musical

Beautifully and lovingly filmed, here is a musical to delight your eyes and ears. No wonder it garnered nine Academy Awards, including Best Picture!

Gigi (Leslie Caron) is a young Parisian girl, living in the late 19th century with her mother and grandmother. She is being groomed for a career as a courtesan by her Aunt Alicia who is well-versed in the intricacies of such relationships, the family having had important social connections for generations. Their acquaintances include Gaston (Louis Jordan), a rich, bored playboy who delights in Gigi’s innocent antics. Honore (Maurice Chevalier), Gaston’s womanizing uncle, worriedly notices his nephew’s increasing interest in Gigi beyond mere amusement. She is presented to Gaston--exquisitely attired and more beautiful than ever. He makes an appeal to her family for an “arrangement,” towards which Gigi has no inclination and, weeping, locks herself in her room. Shortly thereafter, Gaston realizes his love for her surpasses anything he ever thought possible and proposes marriage, to which Gigi happily agrees.

The acting, music, costumes and scenery are superb. Enjoy this endearing entrée into turn-of-the-century France-and romance! And au revoir!

tufted puffs
of diamond dust

too soon become
isinglass tears
that span the years
as memories of snows

Lacy webs
flow and ebb
turning bare trees
into fantasies
of diaphanous foam
aglow in the gloam---
a golden necklace
that leaves me breathless
with its beauty pristine--- the world’s
a more silent place,
it seems.

it has gone
to bring its song
to another place,
another race.

Again it will come,
but its beauty
